WOOD-MIZER TECHNOLOGY & THE ART OF SWEDISH CARPENTRY

'WORKING with your hobby allows for endless hours of enjoyment. I am living the dream!' - so says Rasmus Ström speaking from his carpentry workshop in Falköping in Sweden, which goes under the name of Adelsnickaren (which translates as "The Fine Carpenter").

Utilising Wood-Mizer's woodworking equipment, such as the versatile four-sided MP260 planer/moulder, Rasmus crafts specialised products, such as flooring, kitchen cabinet doors and decorative edgings.

Rasmus has had a passion for pursuing a career in woodworking ever since his youth. His journey began post-graduation from a woodcraft design high school.

He transitioned from his job as a building custodian and technician to launching his own woodworking business after 12 years.

His company, Adelsnickaren, specialises in custom carpentry from planing timber to crafting furniture.

At Adelsnickaren, Wood-Mizer's equipment, particularly the MP260 planer/moulder, is crucial in the production of final products.

'With a single machine I can perform multiple tasks that used to require separate, bulky machines. With its dual horizontal and vertical cutter heads, the MP260 allows for simultaneous operations to be carried out, making it an indispensable, yet compact and lightweight, tool in my workshop,' says Rasmus.

Introduced to Sweden in the early 1990s and now under Wood-Mizer's stewardship, these machines are gaining recognition in both European and global markets.

They offer features, such as cast-iron work-tables for added stability, multiple cutting heads for comprehensive moulding and efficient motor set-ups for powering the cutter heads.

Essential for any modern woodworking shop, these machines support a wide range of cutting heads and accessories.

'I use the MP260 planer/moulder to craft tongue and groove joints on flooring planks, providing a smooth finish and customised grooving in accordance with the specification of the individual client,' says Rasmus.

He has also enhanced his set-up with Wood-Mizer's chip extractor system to maintain a clean and safe working environment, noting its superior power over other brands.

In order to process large wood slabs for furniture, Rasmus collaborates with True North Interior, utilising the Wood-Mizer MB200 SlabMizer. This machine accommodates the moulding and grinding of large surfaces, making it ideal for crafting solid wood table and benches.

'In Sweden, wood is a fundamental building block for homes, which aligns with my dream of constructing my own timber house. My passion extends beyond carpentry to creating timber houses,' concludes Rasmus.
